1. Digital assets themselves are not backed, supported, offered, sponsored, endorsed or promoted by any government, central bank, financial institutions, corporations, the Website or the Company;
2. Digital Assets are generally speculative and generally involve a high degree of risk. The value of digital assets is completely derived by market forces of supply and demand, and they are more volatile than traditional investments in fiat currencies. Trading in cryptocurrencies comes with significant risks, including volatile market price swings or flash crashes, market manipulation, and cybersecurity risks. In addition, cryptocurrency markets and exchanges are not regulated with the same controls or customer protections available in traditional mature markets within equities, FX, commodities and fixed income. You could lose all or a substantial portion of your investment. You must have the financial ability, sophistication/experience and willingness to bear the risks of such losses;
3. The prices of digital assets fluctuate, sometimes dramatically due to a number of factors including but not limited to the fact that digital assets are traded throughout the day without limits on the rise or fall in price, market makers and global government policies may cause major fluctuations in their prices and market manipulation may occur due to illegal, immoral or malicious behavior of market participants causing significant volatility in their prices;
4. While diversification may help spread risk it does not assure a profit, nor protect against loss, in a down market. There is always the potential of losing money when you invest in digital assets. Investors should consider their investment objectives and risks carefully before investing;
5. The price of a digital asset may move up or down, and may become valueless; it is equally as likely that losses will be incurred than profit made as a result of buying and selling digital assets;
6. The price of digital assets may also be significantly affected due to market misconduct by market participants including but not limited to price rigging, market manipulation, market abuse, cybersecurity attacks or other malicious or illicit behaviour;
7. Under certain market conditions, it may be difficult or impossible to liquidate a position quickly at a reasonable price. This can occur, for example, when the market for a particular cryptocurrency suddenly drops, or if trading is halted due to recent news events, unusual trading activity, or changes in the underlying cryptocurrency system;
